After a few interactions with the student and his parents, it was discovered that the student was not studying on a regular basis. The student was advised to create a proper study schedule and to address this issue in order to improve his academic performance. The student performed well in the second CIE tests and appears to be capable of performing well in future tests and examinations.

He had a low attendance percentage, and because he was unable to attend classes, he did not perform well in the first CIE test.	I've interacted with both his parents and him. I advised him to apply for an education loan and begin attending classes as soon as possible. I advised him multiple times, and he began to attend classes on a regular basis. If he attends all of the remaining classes, he will be able to cover the attendance. He also interacted with all of the faculties and cleared up his doubts, so he did well in the second CIE test. He appears to be on track to do well in future tests and semester-end exams.
